

Investing in Art? Here Are 10 Young Artists to Watch in 2017

After a rough 2016, the younger end of the art market is looking toward an exciting 2017.

By

James Tarmy

16 décembre 2016

Maggie Lee

Maggie Lee's Mommy TV from 2016.
Courtesy the artist and Real Fine Arts, NY

Lee's multimedia art is often autobiographical, drawing inspiration and material from both the traumas and mundanities of her young life. She's made a full-length film, Mommy, about the fallout of her mother's unexpected death, which was screened at the Whitney Museum. Most recently her show Fufu's Dreamhouse at the New York gallery Real Fine Arts was made up of a slightly unnerving series of "Jenny doll" dioramas that depicted the fragile, often stumbling process in which contemporary girls are expected to become women. Next she'll be included in group shows at the T293 gallery in Naples and a group show at the Kunsthalle Zurich.